

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The new mistress of the White House has taken formal possession.

Accompanied by Col. Hingham, Mr. Roosevelt's military secretary, Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her daughter Ethel and Kermit; Miss Younger, the governess; the housekeeper at Oyster Bay and a maid, Mrs. Roosevelt reached the new residence at 9.30 o'clock last night.

A number of changes have been made in the furnishings of the mansion. The big canopied beds that have done duty for so long have been replaced by beds in the attic and pretty white bedsteads have been placed in the rooms on the south side of the building which will now be occupied by the Roosevelt children.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will arrive tomorrow.

Couple Were Divorced
for a Few Months—
When Married She Was a Schoolgirl, He a Famous Spendthrift.

Married when a schoolgirl of seventeen; divorced a few months; now about to be remarried to the millionaire spendthrift who first won her—is in brief the romance of beautiful Dorothy Studebaker. The news of the remarriage of Miss Studebaker to Scott McKeown, son of the millionaire oil merchant of Philadelphia and San Francisco, comes fresh from the latter city to-day.

Divorce for a Few Months.

After being divorced for a few months, the wife having obtained the separation on the ground of her husband's habitual intoxication, the couple met in the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Rumors soon spread that a reconciliation had taken place and the couple decided to live together. Now Miss Studebaker admits that it is true, and that she will resume her husband's name in the near future. "Yes," she said to The Evening World correspondent, to-day, "we shall start all over again. I will soon leave for the East to join Mr. McKee, and, as you might say, I shall be reborn at once, and will take the position in Pittsburgh, where we will live. Our future life is going to be happy."

Miss Studebaker was the petted daughter of the millionaire carriage maker of South Bend, Ind., when she met McKeown. He was then in the heyday of his career as a spendthrift, having dissipated a fortune of $1,000,000 in two years.

She was stagestruck and her family were bitterly opposed to such an ambition. So she married McKeown, as she herself said, to gain her freedom. She told afterward in very flippant language of McKeown's courtship.

His Funny Courtship

"He was too funny at times," she said. "I went in for romance and chivalry, but just when I would be expecting a tender speech Scott would say: 'Do you love me, Dot? If you do let's have a drink.' Wasn't it awful?"

To make matters worse Miss Studenbaker struck up a desperate flirtation with Ernest Hastings, a "Prizeo actor," which Mrs. McKeevn enjoyed hugely, according to her own statement.

"I did enjoy Hastings," she said. "He was such fun. We met at 5 o'clock one afternoon and at 5:02 he was making desperate love to me. He sighed like a furnace, all right."

"Finally he made me an offer of marriage. I have had a good many proposals, but I award the laurels to Mr. Hastings. I begged him to arise and turn on the lights, and told him between bursts of laughter that if the comedy was over I would be glad to drop the curtain."

Hastings then left and McKeown gave his wife a $500 diamond to celebrate this good luck. Then Eugene Ormonde, another actor, came along and McKeown was again driven to drink.

fast for twenty-four persons cost $1,000, exclusive of wine, and sixty-five quarts of champagne were drunk. It was here that McKeown made the great speech of his life. In response to a graceful speech of congratulation, he braced himself by holding on to the table and said:

"Well, ladies and gentlemen, I'm glad it's over." He made amends by giving his wife a $6,000 collar of pearls.

McKeown's dissipation proved too much for his wife. She sued for divorce a few months ago and testified that McKeown was drunk three weeks out of every four.

HIGHWAYMAN HANGED.

In an ensuing fight Paymaster Hassler, one of the highwaymen, was killed and another highwayman was seriously wounded. Burgess whipped up his horses and escaped with the money. Markovitch, Morikovich and Lakotch subsequently were arrested and Markovitch subsequently again hid himself in jail. Lakotch was convicted and sentenced to be hanged on Aug. 8, but was re-

WHALEN DOWNS CIVIL SERVICE

ARMORY EMPLOYEES MAY DRAW TWO SALARIES

Declares They Are in the Military Service and Claims Must Be Paid.

The Corporation Counsel, in an opinion sent to Comptroller Coker to-day, held that employees in the various armories in the city are in the military, and not the civil service of the State. He held also that these employees can hold several positions and draw as many salaries. The opinion says:

"I am in receipt of a communication from your Department inclosing the claim of John Corrie, the armorer of the Twelfth Regiment Armory, for expenses in cleaning the said armory for forty-seven days, during which time the armory was used as a drill room by the First Department, through the courtesy of the commanding officer. It appears that the secretary of the Municipal Civil-Service Commission has refused to certify the said claim, which is composed
